

Lawrence Hudson spent his career in Wall Street, living and working in New York, London, and Tokyo. (He has 3 children, one born in each of those cities.) He is married to Catherine Hayden, great-granddaughter of Charles Trumbull Hayden, the founder of Tempe. Lawrence is CFO and cook for Catherine's classical music concert series at the Tempe Center for the Arts, now in its 10th season.

Lawrence's job was picking stocks, both long and short. This required forensic accounting skills. Wall Street is a highly regulated environment. Lawrence got into trouble with both the Fed and the Bank of England. He has lived in Arizona since 2008. He became a PC in 2018. He is captain of Waggoner precinct, in Tempe, LD12. Since 2020 he has worked with Liz Harris, canvassing, and helping with data analysis. He worked in the audit in 2021 and was a member of the data team assisting Doug Logan.
